Throughout St. Roch's and St. Saularly at the close of a business season unparalleled for its dullness, with trade in a state of nearly utter stagnation, and a hard winter fast approaching. The fire originated in the crimical carclessness attendant upon carousing far into the night. It broke out venr the streets were choked with spectators while thousands more lined the brow of the cliff above the fire. Debris, from the burning houses, broken furniture, and other in a house in St. Joseph street, facing the western angle of the Jacques Cartier Market Hall, the upper flat of which was occupied effects covered the thoroughfares, rendering it almost impossible to move. But to turn to the sufferers themselves, it was heart-rending to witness many of the scenes. Some by a man named LETARTE, and the lower by one TRUDEL, a sort of half-groggery, where numbers of low characters were in the roaming about not knowing what to do with habit of resorting and card playing. On Saturday night a number of them had congregated there, and, notwithstanding the ciwil regulation for the closing of such places at midnight, Thurm, allowed them to con-The Last Speech of James Stephens. A grand complimentary ball was given to tinue fe carouse far into the morning. There is but little doubt, therefore, that the awful JAMES STEPHENS, at St. Louis, on Friday calamity owed its origin to drunkenness and night, at which he delivered the following carelessness, as when first observed, between half-past four and five o'clock, yesterday morning, the flames were burning out over the door of TRUDEL's bar-room in the lower flat. The police raised the alarm, the door was burst in, and an attempt made to stifle the fire, but it proved ineffectual, as the opening of the door only served to give vent to the flames, and before a few minutes had

For an hour it did not come, and by that time the fire, driven before the heavy wind, had spread to the wooden suildings in rear of Taunan's, and was moving with lightning rapidity in a south-easterly direction across St. Roch's-beilding after building of the small wooden strucures in that quarter catching and propagating the fire, while showers of burning cinders fell on all sides on the shingled roofs. and every moment increased the number of flaming buildings. It had also communicated in a northerly direction to the houses on the, opposite side of St. Joseph street, fronting Thurbert's, and was rapidly working ts way towards the district laid waste by the disastrous fire in the same quarter last year, and laterally towards the river side. When the water did arrive the flames had obtained too strong a headway to save any of the buildings already attacked, and the attention of the Fire Brigade and Sapeurs and the other fire companies, was turned to the prevention of the spread of the devouring element, by pulling down houses ahead and renching others with water. In rear of the Jacques Cartier Hall, their efforts were effectually frustrated for a time by the acts of some unknown ruffinus, who deliberately cut the bose with axes, their intention being, doubtless, to hinder any attempt to check the progress of the fire, in order to give themselves ample opportunity to rob and plunder. The fire continued to rapidly advance to the southwest, the inflamable material which it everywhere met in the small wooden houses in that quarter adding fuel to it at every step, until it cut diagonally through St. Roch's, debouching upon St. Vallier street, at its intersection with Caron street, about 91 c'clock. On the other ride, towards the river, it had worked its way with equal rapidity as far as St. Anselme street, laterally, and as far as King street, sweeping everything before it over the urned district of last year, on which several new and substantial brick houses had been erected, and uon which, in front of the Congregation Church, a large quantity of firewood was also piled—the only building remaining untouched in this quarter being the church itself, which for over two hours stood in the greatest danger, being sur-rounded on all sides by the flaming houses,

About half-past nine o'clock, a valuable reinforcement to the Fire Brigade arrived in the persons of a detachment of Royal Artillery. The artillery brought a quantity of powder with them, and an attempt was ade to check the flames, at the request of the Mayor, by blowing up in the direction of Caron street, but it proved ineffectual.
